New office added to student government

By Tom Felder
Editor

Trevecca's Student Government Assembly voted last Monday night, in a three hour session, to amend the ASB Constitution in several ways, the most important being the creation of a new ASB office of Attorney General.

The office will become official with a special election to be held in a few weeks, in which Trevecca's first Attorney General will be chosen. Duties of this office will include the handling of all elections and serving as parliamentarian of the SGA.

One group of elections is the Dorm Elections held each Fall. Presently, these elections are under the auspices of the ASB Executive Vice President. Transferring of these duties will free the executive vice president for greater concentration on other responsibilities.

The Attorney General would also be responsible for Homecoming and Valentine's elections. These are presently under the Vice President of Social Life and again, would give that person more time to devote to other tasks.

Most importantly, however, is that the Attorney General would handle all class and ASB elections, including Freshman elections in the Fall, ASB and class elections in the Spring, and any special elections that would need to be held during the year.

Of the reasons given by the supporters of this amendment, the most important seemed to be that the Attorney General would bring consistency to all elections. Whereas elections are now handled by three different officers, this amendment would bring them all under one office.

There was some opposition to the amendment, however.

The Student Life Committee, chaired by Kim King, executive vice president, and which reviews all proposed amendments before presenting them to SGA, voted to recommend rejection. This was based on

Campaigning begins for ASB offices

Campaigning begins tonight for the 1982 Associated Student Body elections. Speeches will be given during chapel Tuesday, April 13, and balloting begins immediately afterward.

Students should vote in the McClurkan lobby after chapel; in the cafeteria during lunch and supper and outside of the SGA office between meals. Balloting ends at 6:00 p.m.

Following is a list of candidates, with information about their goals and qualifications. A few candidates did not turn in information sheets, but their resumes are available on the Post Office bulletin board.

ASB President

Mark Michael is a Junior majoring in Broadcasting and Business Administration. He currently serves as Junior Class President and WNAZ Sports Director.

Mark feels experience in these two positions and as a purchasing agent for an industrial supply company has made him a more organized and responsible person.

His goals are to "put confidence back in (student) government," and to eliminate as much of the apathy among student leaders as possible.

Don Ward is majoring in Biology and is also a Junior. He transferred to Trevecca last Fall from Southwest Mississippi Junior College where he served as Student Body President.

If elected, Don plans to work on several goals. Among them are 1) "to continue improvement" in student-administration relations; 2) "to objectively and openly listen to all suggestions or complaints" from any student; 3) to present these ideas to the administration, and 4) to make next year one of the best in history.

Darrell Wright is a Sophomore Religion major. He is presently serving as President of the Sophomore Class.

Darrell feels his best qualification is his experience in a small business before coming to Trevecca. He worked with his brother and states that in a year they turned a $6,000 investment into a quarter million dollar gross sales.

His goals are to fulfill the obligations of the office, to "increase the openness and activity of the lines of communication between the student body and administration," and to spark an awareness of a Christian lifestyle in students.

ASB Executive Vice President

Rocky Jenkins is a Junior majoring in Business Administration. He has served in many offices, including Vice President of Religion Life, SGA Representative and Chapel Chairperson.

Rocky's goals are to see that the duties of the Student Life Committee are carried out and to be open to any changes which would be necessary.

Jimmy Whitmire is majoring in Religion and Psychology and is also a Junior. He is currently serving as Youth Minister at the Calvary Church of the Nazarene here in Nashville.

Jimmy previously served as his high school student body president and representative to various conferences. He also served as Freshman Class President here at Trevecca.

His goals are to inform students more and to open lines of communication. If elected, Jimmy plans to deal with pressing issues such as more security, better food service and shorter registration lines.

ASB Secretary

Jenny Fisher is a Junior Accounting / Lay Ministries major. She is presently serving as secretary of the Junior Class and as a member of the Georgia Dorm Council.

Her goals are to serve the ASB officers as an efficient secretary, and to fulfill all other responsibilities.

(Information on Bev Adams and Tanya Butler was not available at press time. Please check their resumes.)

ASB Treasurer

Melvin Taylor, a Junior majoring in Business Administration and Accounting, is currently serving as Junior Class SGA Representative and was president of his Sophomore Class in 1980-81.

Melvin plans to use his experience in finances and

Forensics team members go to nationals

By Linda Dickens
Staff Writer

Five members of Trevecca's forensic team have qualified to compete in national competition at Ohio State University, April 29, 30, and May 1. They are Karin Hudson (Prose, Poetry and Duo competition), Brad Jones (Duo), Paul Jones (Prose, Impromptu Speech), Becky Clem (Prose), and Marsha Brockman (After-Dinner Speaking, Rhetorical Criticism, and Poetry).

Forensics? What's forensics? No, in this case it is not a type of medicine. Forensics involves competition in several public speaking and interpretive reading categories. For example, the Impromptu and Extemporaneous speeches give the competitor only a very limited amount of time to prepare and deliver a speech on a given topic. There are also prepared speeches and interpretive reading events. A few tournaments add events such as Children's Literature, News Broadcasting, and Impromptu Sales, in which the participant draws an object from a paper bag and is given 30 seconds to make up a convincing sales pitch for it (what a way to try your creativity!)

Trevecca's forensic squad is a member of the national forensic fraternity Pi Kappa Delta. They, the Mu Chapter, have just held their annual elections, selecting Kim Finch, Secretary/Treasurer; Paul Jones, Vice-President; and Becky Clem, President.

Becky says the team's main objective this quarter is to enlighten the student body to what forensics is all about, and

Religion Retreat will be different

By Adrienne Y. Austin
Staff Writer

The 1982 Religion Retreat is scheduled for April 19th and 20th and will be held at the Tennessee District Center in Dickson, Tennessee. The retreat is open to all people in the religion department—majors and minors.

In the past, the religion department has called in one speaker for the two day activities. He would speak about theological or ministerial concerns. This year the goal is to enlarge that perspective to involve all persons in the religion department such as Christian Education or Youth Ministry majors. The sessions are also designed to be of interest to spouses of religion majors.

This year's retreat will involve a number of speakers from this area. Joe Bowers, director of the retreat, said: "There are a number of people locally who we have not tapped as resources; quality people who have a lot to say to us."

There are six different mini seminars offered at the retreat. Such subjects as Marriage in the Ministry, Children's Ministries and Day Care, Stress in the Ministry, Women's Role in the Ministry and Methods and Means of Communicating to Youth will be discussed. The speakers for the sessions include: Mike Clyburn, Wayne and Wilma Gallup, Mike Malloy, Susie Johnson-Miller, Fred Sykes, Lillian Fuller, Don York, Joe Bowers, Don Dunnington, Craig Keen, Hal Cauthron and Ray Dunning.

Monday night begins the activities with games and get acquainted time. At 8:30 the film John Wesley will be shown. Tuesday the sessions begin at 9:20 when the final session—"Everything you always wanted to know about () but were afraid to ask"—a panel discussion begins.

The cost of the retreat is only five dollars. For more information, contact Joe Bowers or Carl Reed.

Vote: it's more than a right

Last week, thousands of people in El Salvador braved threats, and even bullets, to go to the polls and cast their vote in the national elections. Next Tuesday, there will be no bullets or roadblocks, yet if history repeats itself, most TNC students will not take the time to vote in the ASB elections. Why?

The most common reason given for this has been apathy, or the lack of concern on the part of the voters. This apathy has caused at least three elections in the past year to be extended 48 hours due to a lack of a quorum. Not even half of the eligible voters cared enough to vote.

This apathy has also caused student government administrations (including the present one) to be elected by a MINORITY of students. Should student officials be expected to represent students when only a few of their peers elected them.

Another reason given for not voting is the old excuse, "My one vote is not going to make a difference." That excuse doesn't even hold water on a national level, much less in a community the size of ours. Many elections are decided by a narrow margin. In fact, in last year's ASB elections, a candidate lost by only four votes.

There is also another problem with our voting habits. Trevecca students, generally, are afraid to say NO. There are always some positions which have only one candidate, and for some reason, voters assume that the only choice they have is to vote YES.

However, that is not so. Candidates who are unopposed run on a YES/NO ballot. That means, if you want that person in office, then vote YES. But, if you don't want that person, and you think someone else should be elected, either vote NO or write in a name. That is your right and you should exercise it.

The bottom line is that Trevecca students in general, are not using the few rights of self government they have. Sure it's true that the administration makes all of the final decisions (in important matters), but your student government plays an important role in those decisions, and they are in there fighting for your rights and ideas.

This year we have accused the administration of not treating us as responsible adults. Well in this case at least, we as students need to act—not like the majority of "adults" nationwide who ignore the polls, but—like mature adults who know how to use, and respect the privilege of democratic elections.

Thank you Howard Wall, Jr.

At the end of last quarter, we were finally presented with the long-awaited 1980-81 Dardas. With that wait came a lot of speculations, rumors and comments. However, the foremost attitude should be that of thanks.

When last year's Darda was dropped, uncompleted, by the former editor, Mr. Howard Wall, Jr. quickly took up the slack. He inherited missed deadlines and inadequate material, and through many hours formed it into the miracle we received.

We thank Mr. Wall. We thank him for giving up his time, so that we could have a record of last year's memories. We thank him for working so hard that unless you knew what happened, you could hardly tell there was any problem.

Someone has jokingly said that Mr. Wall should run for Darda editor. He will almost assuredly say that once is enough, but he has shown tremendous strength, leadership and talent. Not only did he found Trev-Echoes, which tells you what is happening, but he saved a yearbook which told us what has happened. For saving our memories of '80-'81, thank you Mr. Wall.

Happy Birthday Sally!

How to pick a candidate

By Dee Metcalf
Staff Writer

"What is the most effective way I can get my point across to them?" This is a big question all new candidates face when running for an office. Since the best source for the answers to these questions comes from those who have been there before, two veteran ASB officers were consulted for their opinion.

Finley Knowles, Vice President of Social Life, looks for responsibility in the candidates, along with availability, a desire to work and a strong, spiritual life. These qualities are important for an effective officer.

He must be responsible enough to meet the demands of his office and his class work. Also, he must be available to be there when his class or organization needs him and not be cutting another project short.

Being an ASB officer is hard work and a candidate must have the desire to work, according to Finley. A spiritually strong life is important in any case.

In a poster, Finley looks for consistency and a more professional approach. "Gimmicks are okay, but professionally done posters appeal to me," said Finley.

The speech should tell about the person and his goals for the office. According to Finley, one should not "just get up and say, 'I hope to do my best.' Anyone can do that."

"The most important thing I have learned in running for office is do not vote for your best friend," said Finley. "Vote for the best (person) for the job."

The number one thing Eddie White, Senior class SGA representative, looks for in a candidate is a genuine concern for the people they are going to represent. A real concern for high academics is another good quality, according to Eddie.

Leadership qualities stand out in a candidate, as does a strong spiritual life.

Different, off-the-wall posters catch Eddie's eye. Posters that play on a person's name, or play on words are also more noticeable. Poster design and time spent in preparation are also important factors in Eddie's view.

In order to have an attention acquiring speech, a person must have a good knowledge of his office. In their speech they must show that they do have a goal or purpose for that office that would be a benefit to their fellow students. A person that is well prepared and genuinely enthusiastic will grab the audience's attention and keep it.

Both Eddie and Finley agree that a candidate that stands out will have a strong spiritual life and a real goal for their office.

in all school activities. He plans to accomplish this through joint efforts with the clubs and classes.

ASB Vice President of TIA

Don Dryden, a Junior majoring in Physical Education, is currently employed at the Nashville Boy's Club and is a member of the Circle K Club.

Don plans to see that the TIA council fulfills its duties and responsibilities and to involve more students in these activities.

Celeste Thompson is a Sophomore majoring in business Administration. She is currently a member of the TIA Council representing Delta.

Her goal is to get more students involved in intramural sports and to make TIA a better organization.

Student government officers spend a great deal of time and effort working with their fellow students: organizing activities, keeping records, negotiating with administration, and providing leadership. The choice of student leaders is an important one, and the upcoming SGA elections, April 13, will give students a chance to take part in officer selection. Prayer, not only by the candidates, but by the whole student body, will help in assuring the continuance of qualified Christian leadership.

All present officers agree that dedication and self-sacrifice are the top qualities needed in a student government officer. In order to help students evaluate the suitability of candidates, specific job descriptions follow:

The Associated Student Body President is responsible for the entire SGA assembly and is ex-officio on all subsidiary committees of SGA. He presides at all meetings and is responsible to initiate ideas and bring them to the attention of the appropriate parties.

ASB President Dwight Gunter enjoys being involved in policy-making and representing the students. Dwight likes the responsibility that comes with this position, and he spends approximately 20-25 hours weekly fulfilling his duties. Though he finds that it is a disadvantage to be held responsible for all actions of the student body, and even the actions of an officer, he feels the benefits far outweigh the disadvantages.

Someone considering running for ASB President should have assertiveness — "ability to take something by the horns and do something with it, right or wrong," Dwight says. They should possess patience, the ability to "suspend judgment till all the facts are in," and willingness to see other points of view. There is a scholarship of $1000 offered to the ASB President.

The duties of the Vice President are to 1) help the President fulfill his responsibilities 2) act as Chairperson of the Student Life Committee 3) publish the all-school calendar 4) have all school publications responsible to him, and 5) take care of any matters not covered under the other offices.

Kim King presently holds this position. She stresses that a vice president needs excellent organizational skills, ability to deal with students and administration, and the ability to stand up for what he believes in. She spends a minimum of 10-15 hours on her job each week.

Kim finds the job to offer self-fulfillment. "It's a type of position where you may do a great job, or a horrible job, and nobody may notice; therefore, you must be self-motivated." The position offers a $900 scholarship.

The ASB Secretary is expected to help the President in any way he/she can, keep records, take minutes of all meetings, coordinate and schedule meetings, take correspondence and type for all ASB officers, and preside over meetings when the President and Vice President are not present.

Secretary Carol Herring feels that it is a great experience to work with her fellow students in a different setting, where they are her bosses and co-workers, as well as her friend. She finds the job requires about five to six hours each week. She says, though, that the job is not as involving and people-oriented as others are.

According to Carol, the secretary should be disciplined and dependable. Good secretarial skills are desirable. A $750 scholarship is offered.

The job of ASB Treasurer involves 1) approving expenditures for student organizations (such as classes and SGA) 2) performing business transactions for SGA (paying bills and making deposits) 3) preparing the monthly financial statements for the ten student organizations.

ASB Treasurer Cindy Trogon found that the job allowed her to get involved with school activities and "to become friends with people I probably wouldn't have gotten to know otherwise," though it involves working more with the officers than directly with the students. Her job requires a few hours each week, though it varies. Cindy explains that many things have to be done on the spur of the moment, so that the treasurer must have time to take care of anything urgent that comes up.

A person considering running for treasurer should have "some idea of how to keep records of accounts, although no real accounting skills are required, and he should be responsible to get things done on time." The treasurer receives a scholarship of $690.

The Vice President of Social Life has the responsibility of coordinating the all-school calendar with the Dean of

ASB Vice President of Religious Life

The sole candidate for this position is Lloyd Brock. He is a Junior Pre-Seminary major, and is the current holder of this office.

Lloyd plans to use his experience this year and to continue his present goals and ideas. His major areas of emphasis will be Project JOY and the improvement of chapel.

ASB Vice President of Social Life

David Caldwell is a Sophomore with a double major in Accounting and Business Administration. Last year he served as President of the Freshman Class and is presently treasurer for Circle K.

David's primary goal is to increase student participation joyable as possible.

Trev-Echoes Editor

Tom Felder is a Junior majoring in Religion. He is currently serving as Trev-Echoes editor.

Tom plans to continue to improve all aspects of Trevecca's student newspaper. He also intends to add even more variety with several new columns and features.

Students, being responsible to see that a variety of activities are booked, that they are spaced correctly, and that they are approved by the Student Activities Committee, of which he is chairman.

The greatest benefit that Finley Knowles finds in this position is the tremendous organizational skills developed that he could not have learned in a class. He enjoys the experience of dealing with people, on and off campus, such as booking agents. The job requires a good deal of time, as he spends between 15 to sometimes 40 hours a week.

The qualifications needed for this job include definite student government experience in a leadership role, such as representative or president, because it is "not a following job — you stir up your own dust instead of doing what others say," Finley comments. He feels it is best in any job to represent the students and their wishes. One should have a good sense of business and the ability to bargain, as Finley states that one could easily spend $2-3000 more each year if he didn't work at it. The scholarship included with this position is $735.

Vice President of Religious Life is required to help plan most of the religious activities, and acts as Chairman of the Religious Life Council. He helps coordinate such programs as chapel services, especially Monday Chapel, Prayer and Praise, Spiritual Renewal Week, and the lecture series. He obtains speakers for the All-School Retreat, and works with TMA/CWA in administering Project JOY.

As Vice President of Religious Life, Lloyd Brock feels the benefits are tremendous. He has a burden for the school, and enjoys the opportunity to encourage growth in the spiritual lives of the students, as well as being aware of the growth in himself. He finds he puts an average of 10-15 hours each week into his duties. Lloyd does feel, though that sometimes things done can be taken for granted. Religious activities have to be approved, also, and sometimes he finds working with faculty members can present problems.

Lloyd feels someone in this position should be a dedicated Christian with a sensitivity to the needs of students; someone who will carry a burden for them. He compares the job to something like that of a pastor or co-chaplain. The Vice President of Religious Life receives a scholarship of $750.

The Trevecca Intramural Association (TIA) President is responsible for all intramural activities, such as basketball and football games. He must be there to see that games are started smoothly, and that all jobs, such as running the clock or keeping statistics, are covered by an assistant. He keeps records of statistics, attends all football games and makes sure someone is in charge of the basketball or other events he cannot attend, posts brackets for tournaments, is chairman of the TIA Council, which establishes game rules, and prevents and straightens any problems he can. He acts as a go-between for faculty and students, to represent the students' wishes, as in the instatement of tackle football this year.

Ed Darling, present TIA President, gains satisfaction from his job in "watching everybody have fun" and meeting new people. It is a way he feels he can help TNC. Disadvantages are that complaints are directed at him, and it is difficult to find enough help to cover all jobs. When there is no one to cover a duty, he must fill in.

Someone considering this position should be willing to work hard, listen to students, and get along well with people. The scholarship received is $714.

The Darda Editor is accountable for the entire production of the yearbook: overseeing the staff, assigning duties, and contributing to the work.

Becky Gillespie is this year's editor. She explains that there is much work involved (15-20 hours a week, minimum) sometimes requiring one to work late at night to meet deadlines. Becky enjoys the satisfaction of seeing something she has worked on published, and the chance to meet people around school and see how the school is run. She also likes the amount of responsibility it places upon her.

to attract new members. Many people don't understand the procedures and goals of forensic competition. "It's not like basketball, where you win or lose. You're up against the best schools in the country, and it's not one team against another; it's many schools against each other," Becky explained.

There are usually between 20-100 people in any one event. Said Marsha Brockman, "We'll come back from a tournament and someone will say, 'Did you win?' If we say no, they'll go, 'Oh, okay,' and that's all. But even if you don't bring home a trophy, if you placed eighth out of 100 people, you're doing really good. The emphasis is on doing well. My wish would be for people at TNC to understand how forensics works and what a good team TNC really has."

"The difference between forensics and sports at Trevecca," commented sponsor Robbie Little, "is that we compete with a lot of top quality, major schools, such as Auburn, Vanderbilt, Rutgers University, University of Alabama."

A Darda editor should be creative, responsible, hard-working, and have previous yearbook experience. The scholarship is $1050.

The editor of Trev-Echoes takes care of running the newspaper — finances, layout, artwork, writing, advertisements, and giving assignments to those staff members mainly responsible for each area.

Tom Felder is the present Trev-Echoes editor. "The benefits come from enjoying newspaper work and from the important experience with people and news that you acquire," he says. He spends about 20 hours during a slow week; 30 hours the week before the paper comes out. Tom finds the lack of money a disadvantage, as it hinders getting better equipment and printing to do the quality work he would like to do. Time is also a disadvantage in getting the work done.

Someone considering running for editor should have a love of journalism, most importantly. Talent is also important. Compensation is $1200 for the first ten issues; a bonus is offered for each extra issue published.

dent, answered these questions by saying that this office is needed to bring consistency to all elections. He also stated that this would give students one more voice in student government, making SGA more representative.

Dwight also stated that several hundred dollars would most likely be available from at least one of several possible sources. This money would pay the Attorney General a scholarship.

Other amendments passed by SGA included a couple dealing with the publications editors. Beginning next year, the editors of Darda and Trev-Echoes will have to give a monthly report in SGA. This follows the pattern of the other vice presidents and committee chairpersons who report weekly to SGA.

The editors of Darda and Trev-Echoes will also be relieved of membership on the Student Life Committee, beginning next year, due to other responsibilities. In their place, a representative will be chosen from the joint publication's staffs.

The Student Government Assembly will make final constitutional revisions this Monday night at 9:30 p.m. According to the Constitution, amendments must be passed before ASB elections, which will be held on Tuesday.

The team has also competed against teams from Harvard, Penn State, William and Mary, Western Kentucky University, Old Dominion University, and Shippensburg State in Pennsylvania. In addition, the team has been able to visit Canada, Washington, D.C., and New York City while traveling, which Little says is "also an educational experience for them." For the past nine years, Trevecca has sponsored its own annual tournament, which has become quite reputable and attracts up to fourteen schools.

One problem the team has run into is having enough money to attend all the tournaments it would like to. Marsha commented, "We have an okay budget, though it is sometimes hard to eat on $7.00 a day. But I remember last year when we had more people traveling, and it was pretty hard."

She went on. "I feel it's a shame that the only full scholarships are given by the athletic department. There are one for academics, and none for speech, even though I feel Trevecca has one of the best communications department around."

Becky agreed. "It's like backing brawn against brains — there is no compensation for anyone being scholastically better than some of the other kids. If you can throw a baseball or shoot a hoop, you've got it made." The forensics team tries to help out on its own in this area by awarding a few $100 scholarships each quarter from its own budget. These go to deserving students who are selected by audition.

Little has been well-pleased with the team this year. "It's a lot of fun, but it requires a lot of hard work and practice." One unique quality of this year has been that three first-year members (Paul Jones, Brad Jones, and Karin Hudson) have qualified to Nationals, which is unusual.

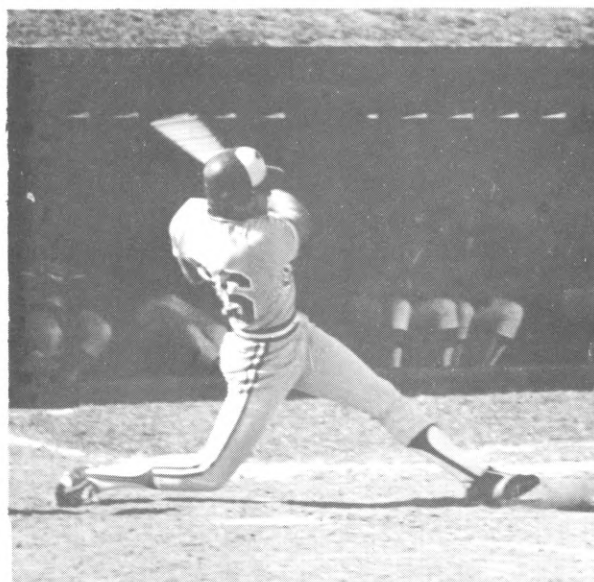

Membership on the team is completely open to anyone who feels he has talent and would enjoy the competition. Anyone interested is urged to see Robbie Little and get involved.

Team member Paul Jones stated his feelings about forensics. "It's a fun time, but it has intrinsic value. Every person must learn to communicate . . . it is extremely important."

Report

A 24-HOUR LOCK-UP POLICY, now being considered or implemented on many campuses, was successful in substantially reducing vandalism in one U. of Iowa dormitory this year, say housing officers. All corridor doors in Burge Residence Hall are locked from the outside, but can be opened by student room keys. Although some students complain that doors are jammed open or that students frequently forget their keys, many also say the policy has reduced hallway traffic and noise.

VOTER REGISTRATION of students would be required under a bill now before the Tennessee state senate. The measure, written by the student government president at Tennessee Technological Institution, would require election commissions in college communities to conduct voter registration on campus two days each term.

ENERGY SAVINGS in Duke U. dormitories are passed on to student groups through a rebate program. Starting this semester, living area groups which save over $25 receive half of what they saved to purchase equipment or other amenities for their living area. The rebates can't be used to fund social activities, however.

'THE PRISONER', a 1968 British television series, is developing a cult following on many campuses, and has even become the subject of academic study. A week-long showing at Yale drew a large audience, chanting along with several show segments. At Tennessee Tech and Arizona State U., sociology departments have offered classes based on "The Prisoner" and its view of the individual versus society.

ALTHOUGH THE EFFORT WAS FUTILE, the U of Florida student fee advisory committee cut $30,200 from UF Athletic Association funding. The athletic funding is legally mandated, and must be restored, but the committee wanted to make a point that athletics should be forced to take the same percentage cuts other student-fee supported groups are taking.

STUDENT AID CUTS may save the government $1.9 billion now, but could cost $156 billion in reduced tax revenues over the next 20 years, according to a College Press Service estimate. Using Bureau of Labor Statistics figures to determine the earning power of men and women with and without college and graduate degrees, CPS theorized that the almost 900,000 students forced out of school by aid cuts would ultimately contribute $156 billion less to tax revenues. The 900,000 figure was estimated from reports by the American Council on Education and the National Center for Education Statistics.
